Youth Violence: Locating and Using the Data is a product of the Children's Safety Network (CSN). The Children's Safety Network consists of six resource centers funded by the Maternal and Child Health Bureau (MCHB) of the United States Department of Health and Human Services. CSN . . .

- provides state and regional maternal and child health (MCH) agencies with technical assistance, information, and resources to help integrate injury and violence prevention programs into existing programs
- facilitates the development of new injury prevention programs
- conducts research and policy activities that improve state-of-the-art injury and violence prevention

This publication was produced by the CSN National Injury and Violence Prevention Resource Center and the CSN Adolescent Violence Prevention Resource Center at Education Development Center, Inc., which are funded by the Maternal and Child Health Bureau, Health Resources and Services Administration, Public Health Service, U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, under cooperative agreements MCJ-253A21-04 and MCJ-253A23-02. Acknowledgments

This publication could not have been created without the generous help of a great number of people. We gratefully acknowledge the thoughtful comments made by our reviewers: Jean Athey, Stephanie Bryn, Joyce DeVaney, Rebecca Judd, Murray Katcher, Barbara Lee, Susan McDonough, Ted Miller, Heather Paul, Jeff Simon, Susan Sorenson, Ann Taulbee, Leslie Upledger-Ray, Billie Weiss, Margaret West, Jennifer Balogh, Barak Wolff, and Janice Yuwiler. We also express appreciation to the staff of many of the organizations who produce the data sets described, as well as other data experts, for participating in the fact-checking process.

EDC reviewers included Rebecca Atnafou, Larry Cohen, Stu Cohen, Kristen Croke, Alison Dana, Anara Guard, Chris Miara, Sue Gallagher, and Cheryl Vince-Whitman. Laurel Fardella fact-checked the data source profiles. Heather McLaughlin assisted during the revision process. Heidi LaFleche copyedited the manuscript. Jennifer Roscoe saw this document through production, printing and graphic design. The cover design was accomplished by Jeanine Merrigan. Davina Grund and Michelle Stober provided administrative support.
